Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to express my interest in a position teaching English as a second language to elementary and middle school students. I am a British-born History graduate from the University of York with several years of teaching experience in South Korea. I have developed strong communication and organisational skills that I believe would make me a valuable addition to your team.

Since 2019, I have worked in English academies in South Korea, teaching students from kindergarten through middle school ages. In these roles, I have planned engaging lessons, supported students in developing confidence and fluency in English, and adapted teaching methods to suit different learning styles and age groups. I have also helped develop online teaching materials and curricula, which strengthened my ability to work independently, manage projects, and use creativity to achieve positive results.

Alongside my teaching experience, my academic background in History has given me excellent research, writing, and analytical skills. During my degree, I completed a dissertation focused on Chinese and Korean history, which deepened my understanding of Korean culture and strengthened my ability to manage long-term projects with attention to detail. My previous work with museums in the UK also helped me build strong teamwork, public speaking, and organisational skills.

I am a hardworking, adaptable, and enthusiastic individual who enjoys working with people from different backgrounds. Having lived and worked abroad for several years, I am comfortable in international environments.

Thank you for taking the time to consider my application. I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely

Nationality: British

A British-born BA History graduate with experience teaching the English language.

Education

History BA (Hons), University of York (2016 - 2019)

Second class honours: division one

As a part of my degree, I presented my ideas and work to groups of around twenty students. Through working with and the suggestions of my peers, I adapted my knowledge and own ideas.

Additionally, the pieces of assessed work I produced over my three years at university furthered my ability to construct pieces of work with high levels of linguistic skill.

Writing my dissertation enabled me to construct a piece of work through my own interests and ideas with confidence. Over the period of production, I strengthened my research skills and balanced this long-term project with other work throughout the year. My dissertation focused on Chinese and Korean history and so I gained a stronger understanding of Korean culture through this research paper.

Experience

English Private academy, South Korea (2021- present)

English private academy, South Korea (2019 - 2021)

- I worked at English private academy, South Korea which entailed teaching English to both kindergarten and elementary children. I work at English Academy and my role is to teach elementary and middle school students.
- My role in the kindergarten classes was to teach vocabulary and conversational English. I prepared lessons and games before class to make sure that children not only learnt to the best of their ability but also had fun whilst doing so. I also taught reading and phonics which helped the students with their English fluency. Finally, I supported the school on festive events, birthdays and trips which were all conducted in English.
- My role in the Elementary classes has been and is to teach children higher levels of vocabulary, speaking, spelling, writing and reading. These lessons have helped younger students to develop and improve their fluency, speaking ability, confidence and prepared them for topics they would need to know in future English language exams. I have made sure that all students were engaged in lessons, enjoying classes and had learnt and memorised the course by the end of the term.

My role for the middle school classes is to prepare the students not only for their exams but to also help them with English that will help them in their future endeavours.

I have also been in charge of developing an online curriculum for my academy by making lessons that are suitable for online teaching. These have been successful and received positive feedback from parents.

Leeds Museums' Preservative Party (2013 - 2016)

Working on object preservation of Leeds museums' archival collection and shadowed curators' work on object preservation and presentation.

Was part of the historical outreach team that went to groups in the local community, teenagers and the elderly, to give speeches and tours, and explain how they can access history in their local communities.

Curated large and miniature scale exhibitions on a wide range of genres through museums and online sources. Exhibitions were tailored by the team to reach a younger audience.

In Their Footsteps- Preservative Party (2016 - 2017)

- I aided the research, writing and editing of information and object panels in my team's space within the exhibition and the main exhibition.
- I visited archives and searched through Leeds' online archive system to find objects to use in the exhibition. I researched objects chosen and major figures that were presented throughout the exhibition.
- I aided installation of my team's 'At Home' section and the main exhibition. Once the exhibition was opened to the public, I gave free tours to the public, mainly adults and elementary aged children, aiding them with further information on the First World War.
- I was part of the team which was awarded The Marsh Trust Award, by The British Museum in 2016, for my participation in the exhibition.

World War One (WW1) Timeline- Preservative Party (2013)

- I researched, wrote and edited for a large-scale online archive which presented a local and global timeline of events during the First World War. I had to work with a large team, museum staff, Leeds City council and curators to achieve the high level of information on the timeline. This scheme was aimed at and tailored for a younger generation, mainly teenagers and young adults.
