

I am writing to express my interest in an English teaching position at your school. As a Canadian educator with a Bachelor of Arts in Linguistics and a University Certificate in Adult Education from Concordia University, I bring both strong academic training and several years of practical classroom experience teaching English to students of various ages in South Korea.

Currently, I teach middle and high school students at an English academy, where my primary focus is literature analysis, essay writing, and debate-based speaking instruction. I design lessons that help students move beyond surface-level comprehension and develop the ability to critically analyze texts, construct well-structured essays, and defend their opinions through logical arguments and counterarguments. My background in linguistics allows me to teach grammar and language structure clearly and systematically, helping students understand not only how English works, but why it works that way.

Previously, I taught elementary students, where I focused on strengthening reading fluency, writing foundations, and spoken communication skills. This experience helped me develop adaptability in the classroom and the ability to adjust instruction according to students' age, level, and confidence. Throughout my career, I have prioritized creating structured, engaging lessons that build both academic competence and self-confidence.

I am seeking a stable, long-term position where I can contribute meaningfully to students' academic development and to the broader school community. I am particularly interested in continuing to work in South Korea because of its strong emphasis on education and academic achievement, and I would be enthusiastic about supporting students in developing advanced English proficiency for both examinations and real-world communication.

Thank you for considering my application.

Sincerely,
Samuel Cuerrier
